What is Transition Assessment?

“Transition assessment is an ongoing process of collecting information on the student’s strengths, needs, preferences, and interests as they relate to the demands of current and future living, learning, and working environments. This process begins at age 14 or earlier and will continue until the student graduates or exits high school. Information from this process is used to drive the IEP and transition planning process and to help develop the Summary of Performance (SoP) document detailing the student’s academic and functional performance and postsecondary goals.” (adapted from: Sitlington, P. L., Neubert, D. A., Begun, W. H., Lombard, R. C., & Leconte, P. J. (2007). Assess for success: A practitioner’s handbook on transition assessment (2nd ed.). Thousand Oaks, CA: Corwin Press. p. 2-3)

Effective Practice:

The results of age-appropriate transition assessments form the foundation of the student’s transition plan. Transition assessments should begin well before the IEP team meeting where the transition plan is to be developed to ensure meaningful, high quality information is available for the IEP team to consider.

Because adolescents are often unsure of their future plans, transition assessments should be an ongoing process. Assessment data serves as the common thread in the transition process and forms the basis for defining goals and services to be included in the Individualized Education Program (IEP). (Sitlington, P. L., Neubert, D. A., & Leconte, P. J. (1997). Transition assessment: The position of the Division on Career Development and Transition. Career Development for Exceptional Individuals, 20, p. 70-71).

Transition assessments come in two general formats – formal and informal. Informal measures may include interviews or questionnaires, direct observations, anecdotal records, environmental or situational analysis, curriculum-based assessments, interest inventories, preference assessments, and transition planning inventories. Formal measures include adaptive behavior and independent living assessments, aptitude tests, interest assessments, intelligence tests, achievement tests, personality or preference tests, career development measures, on the job or training evaluations, and measures of self-determination.

In rare cases, the student will be unable or unwilling to discuss his/her own needs, preferences, strengths, or interests. In these instances, age-appropriate transition assessment may be based on teacher observations, input from the student’s family, or information contained in the student’s records.

This Transition Assessment Guide was created by Brian Kenney (Transition Improvement Grant – Southern Regional Coordinator) and Kathy Tuttle (Transition Improvement Grant – Northern Regional Coordinator). The Transition Improvement Grant would like to thank the following individuals for their contributions to the development of this Guide:
